

Term: "Analytical"

Definition:

An analytical thesis is original and thoughtful going beyond the obvious and literal; Some theses may seem analytical to a reader but not reflect the fact that the very argument being made was taught directly to the students. Both the analytical and nuanced nature of a thesis are best judged by the teacher who taught the content being written about in the paper.